Remarks by Prof. Richard Hovhannesian will be given in a video by Arat Hovhannesian.

Perroomian has written the story of her father, Haghtas (Haght) Hovhannesian, who was abducted by the Soviet NKVD from Yerevan, from during the rearing years of World War II. The book reconstructs his experiences, misadventures, and survival of 12 years hard labor in Siberia from 1942 to 1954, when he was released under the general pardon issued after Stalin's death to war prisoners and all victims of Stalinist purges. The book contains the English rendering of untold stories he began to tell her in his late life when he felt it was his duty to tell and share his remarkable experience of the Gulag.

Haght's survival physically broken, taught with the effect of years of competitive suffering in the notorious North hard labor camp, but in good spirit. He returned to his family, his "oldworld" wife and two orphan girls, he rebuilt his career and his family's shattered life. But not everything went smoothly. He had challenges to overcome as he reintegrated into the society he was finally released from more than a decade before.

Dr. Rubina Perroomian holds a Ph.D. in Near Eastern Languages and Cultures from UCLA and has been a lecturer in Armenian Language and Literature. She is the author of several books, chapters, and research articles in scholarly journals.

UCLA students. Remarks by Prof. Richard Hovannisian's will be shown in a video by Ani Hovannisian. Peroomian has written the story of her father, Baghdassar (Baghdik) Minasian, who was abducted by the Soviet NKVD from Tabriz, Iran, during the waning years of World War II. The book reconstructs his incarceration, interrogation, and sentence of 10 years hard labor in Siberia from 1944 to 1954, when he was released under the general pardon issued after Stalin's death to war prisoners and all victims of Stalinist purges. The book contains the English rendering of unfinished memoirs he began to write late in life when he felt himself ready to relive and relate his traumatic experience of the Gulag. Baghdik returned physically broken, fraught with the effect of years of unspeakable suffering in the notorious Norilsk hard labor camp, but in good spirit. He returned to his family, his "widowed" wife and two orphan girls, to rebuild his own and his family's shattered life. But not everything went smoothly. He had challenges to overcome as he reintegrated into the society he was forcibly removed from more than a decade before.
